Positioned for success

Positioning is about how your customers perceive you and your products – not about the features and characteristics they actually have. To be successful you have to carve out a unique position to differentiate yourself from competitors.

The simplest positioning strategy is to be first! Most people, for example, remember that Charles Lindbergh was the first man to fly solo across the Atlantic. Fewer people know who was number two.

What do you do if you're not first? One thing could be to differentiate yourself by launching a new category. Amelia Earhart did it – she was not only the second person to fly solo across the Atlantic – she was the first woman to do it.

Another well-known example of positioning is "David against Goliath" that Avis so successfully ran – "We try harder". A third example is the "non-cola" positioning that 7UP has used.

Choosing the right location is the basis for successful marketing. The path takes you through market analysis, identification of opportunities, selection of segments, differentiation of the offer and then consistent and sustained communication according to the chosen strategy.

This document summarizes the issues worthy of consideration in the development of a branding strategy. Don't expect any fixed or general solutions. Successful solutions are the result of a concerted effort, based on the right assumptions and facts.

We use a customized version of this structure when we go through projects so feel free to use the material as a checklist or as a basis for discussion.
